IT LAW SERIES: Legal and Regulatory Issues with Artificial Intelligence

Stay current on the latest IT law developments with our IT Law Series focused on technology, media, and telecommunications law.

In a world where generative AI is evolving at lightning speed, understanding its legal and ethical impact is no longer optional – it's essential. Through our half day seminar, explore how emerging AI capabilities are reshaping the legal landscape and what legal professionals must do to stay relevant.

Gain timely insights to help you:

- Navigate emerging legal risks around AI-generated content, data governance, and liability
- Understand the evolving role of AI in legal workflows—from contract review to courtroom avatars
- Anticipate how courts and clients are responding, and what this means for legal service delivery

Join leading policymakers and senior practitioners as they share their perspectives on the challenges and opportunities of generative AI – sign up now!

PROGRAMME OVERVIEW AND TOPICS

This seminar series aims to provide participants with an overview of some of the latest IT law issues and developments. Every session focuses on a different topic and will be conducted by a variety of leading practitioners and academics in the relevant field, who will deliver presentations and participate in a Q&A discussion with opportunities for participants to pose questions.

Pre-recorded lectures introducing technology law will be made available to participants ahead of each lecture.

Seminar 4: Legal and Regulatory Issues with Artificial Intelligence

(30 July 2025, Wednesday, SGT 2.00 – 5.30pm)

Synopsis: A lot has changed since the early days of generative AI. We now have multimodal systems that understand and generate text, images, audio, and video which are more realistic than ever; retrieval-augmented generation capabilities that can access real-time data; deep reasoning and research models that mimic human thought and analysis; and agentic AI capable of performing autonomous tasks with minimal supervision. The cost of compute continues to fall, while model sizes and context windows continue to grow.

How will the law and regulators adapt, and address complex questions about liability, intellectual property, data governance, and professional ethics? And at the same time, what do these developments mean for legal practice – from AI-assisted drafting and review; to synthetic evidence; and even robotic avatars engaged in courtroom advocacy, how are courts already starting to react and client expectations changing, and what must the legal profession do to keep up and remain relevant?

Join us for this seminar, which gathers policymakers and senior lawyers to share their insights and experience, in order to try to navigate the fast-changing generative AI landscape.
